

International Experience

BASIC TIPS:

- Having international experience by working or studying abroad can often help you stand out as a candidate for internships/co-ops!
- Experience abroad often gives you a competitive “edge.” Today many companies are global, and they are looking for candidates who understand various cultures and how to behave in circumstances that can arise as a result.
- Having international experience can often be a clear differentiator on a resume when you’re interviewing with global companies. Knowing how to share that experience with companies in an interview can set you apart as a candidate.
- International experience can illustrate to employers that you are flexible, can work with people of different cultures, and that you are not afraid of new experiences.