

Quick Tips: Military to Civilian

BASIC TIPS:

- When transitioning from the military to the civilian workforce, be sure to take advantage of your base's transition office.
- The transition office will teach you how to take the skills you've learned in the military and translate them into skills that civilian organizations are looking for.
- Skills such as leadership, management, and accountability usually transition well from your military experiences to the civilian workforce.
- The nation depended on you during your military service; highlight your applicable skills and assure your prospective employer that he/she can depend on you in a similar manner at their organization.
- The key to success is marketing your skills in a way that civilian companies will recognize, understand, and appreciate.
